With their consoling words and uplifting tempos, gospel music can reverberates through the halls of Jack Britt. The Gospel Choir continues the tradition it began in 2002.

With its “iron-fist” adviser, Mr. Ken McKinnon, the club hopes to bring faith and music to the high-school population.

Back in 2002, McKinnon said he began this life-changing club, opening it to all students who want to participate. “The scripture says, faith without works is dead,” McKinnon said. “This is not a competition.”

Prayer, he said, remains an essential element of this group. Students use prayer to bring forth their gifts.

“I love singing because I’ve been doing it since I was little,” sophomore Kiara S. said.

Also an adviser for Total Image and the Step Team, McKinnon said he still manages to hold the Gospel Choir as one of his many priorities. “Just seeing what students get out of this club is what I get out of being the adviser,” McKinnon said.

The Gospel Choir will meet again from 4-5:30 p.m. in room B105. He said students do not need to audition to join. Students interested in the Gospel Choir are expected to have the ability to speak up, but most importantly, sing out.
